

From the data provided alone, it is hard to see how the result of the program would be an ellipse like it was. I now understand how the program works, but I wouldn't initially imagine that it would result in that graph.

PE increases as KE decreases, and vice versa. This is because potential energy, when it is used, becomes kinetic energy. The two cannot increase or decrease at the same time, because energy is neither created or destroyed.